For my dear friend, Sugar- my favorite Oklahoma gal

Rodgers and Hammerstein's OKLAHOMA opened on Broadway on March 31, 1943. The musical is based on the play Green Grow the Lilacs by Lynn Griggs and ran for an unprecedented 2,212 performances! The show was groundbreaking in that it epitomized the development of what we now know as the "book musical". The songs and dances were fully integrated into the story including the Dream Ballet choreographed by Agnes De Mille. The 1955 film adaptation starring Shirley Jones and Gordon MacRae won several Oscars and the latest Broadway revival in 2019 won the Tony Award for Best Revival of a Musical. This show is timeless!

When I first announced the title, the kids were not excited overall and many of them had never seen the show. (What??!!) However, theatre education is not just about what is popular and will sell out at the box office. Our job is to instruct through the medium of theatre; fine-tuning the familiar and introducing students to the unfamiliar. Observing this cast discover this glorious score, multi-faceted characters; and fun choreography has been a joy! The storyline and themes are just as relevant today as in 1943 and are a constant reminder of common elements that make us all human: fear; guilt; jealousy; excitement; darkness; love.

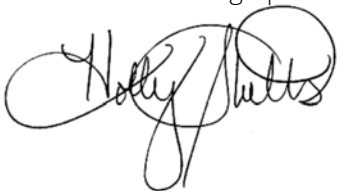

Bubbling under the surface of this story is a constant struggle to be seen, heard, and accepted. That dark and 'lonely room' is all too real for many in our world. May we all strive to be instruments of peace and console; understand; and love.

79 years after it was first experienced, this golden-age musical comes to life at Bishop Chatard and proves that when piece of art is crafted so masterfully, an old-fashioned musical can remain relevant, fresh, and exciting.

I've got a beautiful feeling that everything's going our way and you will agree that OKLAHOMA is OK!
